Philadelphia, October 27th, 1886.

1346 North Broad Street,

To my Grandchildren:

You know that there exists a natural desire in most persons, especially in those far advanced in years, as I am now, to learn all they can concerning their ancestry, and preserve what they learn; hence I, influenced by that motive, have occupied myself in arranging the few following pages with what knowledge I have been able to collect concerning the Sartin tribe to which you belong. Perhaps the subject may interest you sufficiently to induce you to preserve this record, as I hope you will, for if you care little about it now, those who come after you may care a good deal. With this expectation I have prepared it.

I remember, when I was quite young, during my father's life time—and who died when I was but eight and a half years old—that mention was occasionally made of the family tradition, that our forefathers were broadcloth weavers who fled from France to escape the persecutions instituted against those who were convicted of reading the Bible. For a long time I enter-mined the number of the first edition of the Bible which occurred in the year 1457, and not of the revelation of the invention of the art of printing, the year 1469. But I now possess a certain knowledge that it took place in the six hundred and thirty years prior before that event, and more than forty years prior even to the promulgation of that famous edict of religious toleration of Henry IV. in the year 1598. You will see by the collected authentic records, that the Saracens must not have been enough here, who composed the first edition of the Bible, and the persecutions began, after, and consequent on the invention of the art of printing.

The lists of the Baptisms, Marriages and Burials of the Saracens preserved in the old parish records of the Parish Church of Trevelyan, in Wiltshire, England,
show that they were residents of that town in 1557,
and how long before that date, I have at present no means of ascertaining precisely.

What caused them to leave France for England the following narrative will explain. After the invention of the art of printing, among the earliest productions
of the press were Bibles, but from no other higher motive than prospective pecuniary gain. Gutenberg and Schaeffer not possessing sufficient means to carry on their printing business, confided their secret to John Fust, a wealthy goldsmith of Mainz, who joined them in their venture and supplied the necessary funds. These Bibles (in the Latin vulgate) were at first sold as, and at the price of, manuscripts. The first edition being exhausted, Faust went to Paris, carrying with him a second edition, which he began selling at the usual high rate, but getting impatient to disencumber himself of the balance of the edition, he sold them at such low prices compared with those charged at first, that it caused surprise and suspicion. Different copies were compared, and found to be so exactly alike, that it was concluded they could only have been so written by aid from the devil. One, so Faust was arrested on the charge of being in league with the devil, and hence originated the phrase, "The devil and Doctor Faustus." He obtained his liberty only by revealing the secret of the manner of printing them.

The earliest Bibles could be read only by the learned, because they were in the Latin vulgate. One of these reached the library of the convent of Erfurt, where Luther, at the age of twenty-one, found it, while he was there in training to be a monk. But translations of parts of the Scriptures into the language of the people soon began to appear, and finally these were superseded by a complete French version of the entire Bible, printed at Antwerp, and issued in successive portions between the years 1542 and 1560. This translation was the work of Jacques le Fevre, or Faber, of Estaples, in Picardy, and it was eagerly sought and read by the people, causing a reaction against the superstition and impiety which then generally prevailed.

The church authorities became alarmed; the Inquisition was armed with new powers, and an order was issued from Rome prohibiting printing. The Sorbonne at Paris was appealed to, and it obtained from the king (Francis the First) an ordinance for the suppression of printing, which was promulgated on the 26th day of February, 1535. Bibles and Testaments were now seized wherever found, and burned. Printers convicted of printing Bibles were burned, and next followed the burning at the stake of those who were only guilty of selling or reading them. In Paris alone, during the six months ending in June, 1534, there were twenty-one persons burned alive, one of them a woman. A forcible expression was given of the situation, and views of the Church, by the Vicar of Croydon, England, in a sermon preached at St. Paul's Cross, London, in which he declared "We must root out printing or printing will root out us." But we have seen that "the art preservative of all arts" could not be rooted out.

The place with which we, the Sarlatins, have the nearest interest, is the town of Meaux, situated about fifty miles northeast from Paris, and near the then Flemish frontier. It was full of working people, wool carders, fullers, cloth weavers and other artisans, and among these the reform sentiments took early and deep root. This was probably helped by the proximity of the Flemish towns, whose people were engaged in similar occupations, and who were earnest in their convictions of the value of the new religious awakening. The new Bishop of Meaux, Guillaume Briçonnet, Count of Montbrun, on taking charge of his diocese, had been shocked at the licentiousness of his clergy and their utter neglect of their ministerial duties. He was at the same time profoundly impressed by the manifest improvement in the manners and morals of the people called Gueux. Accordingly he began the gratuitous distribution of printed Testaments among the poorer people, and this was followed by still further improvement. But the Bishop was heavily fined by his superiors for what he had done, and from that time he shrank out of sight. Persecution was diligently applied to crush out the new heresy, and no matter what the learning or rank of the suspected heretic, he had to satisfy the tribunal before which he was summoned, or die at the stake. No wonder that those who could, fled for refuge to England.

Arrived there, they were welcomed and protected by the authorities, partly because they were generally skilled artisans; for the English kings had long been anxious to introduce manufactures into the country.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $f(x)$ defined by the equation $f(x) = \int_0^x f(t) dt$. It is shown that $f(x)$ is a constant function.

2. In the second part, we consider the function $g(x)$ defined by the equation $g(x) = \int_0^x g(t) dt$. It is shown that $g(x)$ is a constant function.

3. The third part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $h(x)$ defined by the equation $h(x) = \int_0^x h(t) dt$. It is shown that $h(x)$ is a constant function.

4. In the fourth part, we consider the function $k(x)$ defined by the equation $k(x) = \int_0^x k(t) dt$. It is shown that $k(x)$ is a constant function.

5. The fifth part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $l(x)$ defined by the equation $l(x) = \int_0^x l(t) dt$. It is shown that $l(x)$ is a constant function.

perpetual youth, over 100 years of age, and he is him as old.

Not long since, a friend of mine, who is a trait of C. O. put me in the way of getting from life, in a couple of days. He was then 100, he at once set off for Italy, and he was greatly impressed with it, and has written of it enthusiastically.
It is often asserted that he is a perfect master in bedding and carpentering, and that he is a perfect

he would need to live in large towns, and he is William Saradin, the well-known by the name of his son, who frequently remarks that he is so much older than his father.

Mr. Saradin is prominent in the order of the Masons,
and has received thirty-six degrees in his organization.
a Past Master of his Lodge, and Past High Priest of his Chapter. Has been for many years annually re-elected Grand Treasurer of twenty-nine degrees of the Ancient Accepted Rite, and is a Rosicrucian.

As he was chief of the Art Department of the great Centennial Exhibition in 1876, so he has been selected as the fittest man to occupy the corresponding position in the American Exhibition to be held in London in 1887.

The End.

OVERLEAF.

LET THE DEAD PAST BURY ITS DEAD
ACT — ACT IN THE LIVING PRESENT
HEART WITHIN AND OOD O'ERHEAD.

ART IS LONG, AND TIME IS FLEETING
AND OUR HEARTS THOUGH STOUT AND BRAVE
STILL LIKE MUFFLED DRUMS ARE BEATING
FUNERAL MARCHES TO THE GRAVE.

NOT ENJOYMENT AND NOT GORROW, IS OUR DESTINED END US WAY,
BUT TO ACT, THAN EARN FUDORROW
FIND US, FARTHER THAN TODAY.

LIVES OF GREAT MEN ALL REMIND US
WE CAN MAKE OUR LIVES SURELINE
AND, DEPARTING, LEAVE BEHIND US
FOOTPRINTS ON THE SANDS OF TIME

FOOTPRINTS THAT BEHOLD ANOTHER
WRITING O'ER LIFE'S TROUBLED MAIN
SOME FORLORN AND SHIPWRECKED BROTHER
SEEING MAY TAKE HEART AGAIN:

LET US THEN BE UP AND DOING
WITH A HEART FOR ANY FATE
STILL ACHIEVING STILL PURSUING LEARN TO LABOR AND TO WAIT.
